Singapore faces risk of slower growth, higher inflation, says DPM Gan

Multi-agency effort needed to cushion impact as Mid-East conflict drags on

Ovais Subhani
Senior Business
Correspondent

Singapore's economic growth in the coming quarters is likely to be affected by the ongoing Middle East conflict, and inflation is expected to be higher than earlier estimated, Deputy Prime Minister Gan Kim Yong said on April 7.

He told Parliament that the impact of supply disruptions and higher prices of energy as well as raw materials will cascade through the economy, pushing up business and transport costs and consumer prices.

This will in turn dampen demand and slow down economic growth worldwide.

Singapore will not be able to insulate itself completely from the crisis, and must respond with a coordinated, multi-agency effort to cushion the impact on its people and economy, he added.

With the conflict involving the US, Israel and Iran entering its sixth week, Singapore is already suffering from higher petrol prices and electricity tariffs. If the conflict is protracted, higher inflation in Singapore's source markets could also lead to further import price increases over time, DPM Gan said.

"These pressures will be felt by households in more expensive electricity, transport and daily necessities," he added. "Lower-income households will be more affected, as a larger share of their spending goes to necessities."

DPM Gan noted that while many sectors will be hit, some will feel the effects more than others. In manufacturing, industries that rely on natural gas as well as crude oil and its derivatives as feedstock will be most directly impacted.

Beyond energy and chemicals, industries such as electronics, precision engineering and other energy-intensive clusters will also be affected by higher fuel and electricity prices.

Outward-oriented sectors like air and sea transport and tourism will feel the impact of higher costs and weaker external demand.

Domestically oriented sectors such as retail, food services and private land transport will also face higher operating costs, DPM

Deputy Prime Minister Gan Kim Yong, who is also Minister for Trade and Industry, said that Singapore has reaffirmed with Australia and New Zealand their commitments to keeping the supplies of essential goods flowing. PHOTO: MDDI es and rising inflation – will be hard to contain, regardless of what comes next.

Measures ranging from pipelines that bypass the waterway – which allows oil and natural gas to flow from the Persian Gulf to the rest of the Indian Ocean – to tapping strategic reserves have offered a cushion.

But this still leaves a gap of at least eight million barrels per day between supply and demand, according to the International Energy Agency (IEA).

Since most of the energy flowing from the Gulf is destined for Asia, including Singapore, regional policymakers face tough decisions to mitigate the pain. Those decisions will get tougher if hostilities do not end soon enough.

DPM Gan said that in March, only about six vessels on average passed through the Strait of Hormuz each day, compared with about 135 normally, making the supply disruption the worst since the 1973 oil embargo.

"President Trump has said recently that the US has almost accomplished its goals in Iran, but it is still not clear when the conflict will end and when the Strait will be reopened," he said, referring to US President Donald Trump.

DPM Gan added that the crisis is unlikely to be over any time soon and Singapore must be prepared for its effects to persist for some time.

"Even more worrying is the risk of escalation – including further damage to energy infrastructure, or a prolonged blockade of the Strait of Hormuz," he said. "This could trigger a global energy crunch – slowing global growth and pushing up inflation worldwide."

IEA executive director Fatih Birol said in March that the war has and households need to do their part to conserve energy.

Households can use climate vouchers to purchase more energy-efficient appliances, adopt simple measures such as using fans instead of air-conditioning, and take public transport instead of driving, said DPM Gan.

Businesses can tap schemes such as the Energy Efficiency Grant and invest in more efficient equipment.

Meanwhile, DPM Gan said, Singapore will also strengthen its resilience against inflation shocks and supply chain disruptions by building up inventories and diversifying its sources of supply. But it will always remain dependent on imports for its supplies, he noted.

In that regard, Prime Minister Lawrence Wong has spoken to Australian Prime Minister Anthony Albanese.

Australia, which is one of the world's top LNG exporters, and Singapore have jointly reaffirmed their commitment to support the flow of essential goods, said DPM Gan.

PM Wong has also spoken to New Zealand Prime Minister Christopher Luxon to reaffirm the two countries' commitment to strengthen supply resilience and mitigate disruptions.

In October 2025, Singapore and New Zealand concluded an agreement on trade in essential supplies. DPM Gan said it was a timely framework to ensure the continued flow of critical goods between the countries.

DPM Gan said ASEAN foreign ministers and economic ministers have also discussed and underscored the importance of maintaining stable, open and reliable global energy supply chains, as well as minimising disruptions to the flow of essential supplies. In

GuocoLand's River Modern sells 90% of units on launch weekend at average price of S$3,266 psf

Real estate agencies say the robust sales reflect sustained demand for Core Central Region projects

By Paige Lim
paigelim@sp.com.sg

RIVERMODERN condominiums River Modern at River Valley moved 90 per cent of its units – 410 of the 455 in total – at an average price of S$3,266 per square foot (psf) over its launch weekend, said developer GuocoLand on Sunday (Mar 8).

The apartments sold were priced from S$1.5 million for a two-bedroom unit to S$6.7 million for a four-bedder. The highest selling price recorded was S$3,693 psf.

The 99-year leasehold project has a District 9 address and comprises 455 residential units across two 16-storey blocks. It occupies a 126,325 square foot (sq ft) site, with about 4,300 sq ft of commercial shops on the first storey.

GuocoLand noted strong demand for all unit types, with Singaporeans and permanent residents accounting for nearly all the buyers. The majority are owner-occupiers across a range of household sizes, from singles to multi-generational families.

Modern was the best-selling private residential non-landed project in 2020 to date, based on units and percentage.

He added that the shrinking premium of units in the CCR region over developments in the rest of Central Region "presented a value proposition that many buyers found hard to ignore".

Pinery Residences sells 92.5% of units at average price of S$2,546 psf at launch

A significant proportion of buyers could be upgraders from within Tampines, say real estate players

By Elyvia Tan
elyviatan@sp.com.sg

PINERY Residences, a Tampines project by Hui Hup Realty and Sunway MCL, sold 594 units, or 92.5 per cent of its 642 units over its launch weekend, at an average selling price of S$2,546 per square foot (psf).

The mixed-use development recorded robust demand across all unit types, the developers said in a Sunday (Mar 28) media statement, adding that Singaporeans and permanent residents accounted for nearly all buyers.

The strong sales achieved at launch reflect the project's compelling value proposition and the continued demand for well-located integrated developments in established residential areas. "Hui Hup and Sunway added."

The development comprises six blocks of 14-storey residential units, sitting atop a 121,000 square foot mall, and is linked with Tampines West MRT station on the Downtown Line.

Moham Sandrasegaran, head of research and data analytics at SRI, noted that two-bedroom units were sold out, while three-bedders configurations were nearly completely taken up.

"This suggests strong participation from a wide buyer pool, including young couples, families and HDB upgraders," he said.

Huttons Asia chief executive officer Mark Yip said buyers of the two and three-bedroom units were likely investors and smaller families. He added that four-bedder units were sold out.

"Tampines Data Analytics estimates a mix of 40 to 20 owner-occupiers and investors for Pinery Residences," he added.

lighting. Parkview Residences in Tampines Avenue 11 is particularly attractive, residents achieved a take-up rate of about 87 per cent during its February 2025 launch weekend, with sales since increasing steadily to about 96 per cent.

"This reflects not just project-specific attributes, but also the strength of Tampines as a mature regional centre with a vibrant upgrader base and sustained housing demand," he added.

Tampines appeal

Real estate players agreed that a

While the war in Iran has hit some stock markets and darkened economic outlooks, demand for recent residential launches seem to have been unaffected. Niu said.

This could be due to the longer investment horizon of many homebuyers, which is typically more than four years because of the four-year duration of the seller's stamp duty," he suggested.

Many property buyers would hold the view that four years from now, the negative impact from the Iran war would have dissipated.

Chiu of ERA noted a tightening private housing supply in the region, with no upcoming government land sales in the area in Tampines and only one other new private home launch expected in the next five years. This scarcity of new options positions Pinery Residences well to capture pent-up demand, he said.

Mak said the Q2 tender for a residential site at Dover Drive – which drew a supply of S$1,530 psf per plot ratio, the highest land rate for a 99-year leasehold Q2 residential site in the history of the Bala Yoda and one north area – could have boosted the confidence of homebuyers at the launch of Pinery Residences.

Hong said buyers recognise the potential for long-term price appreciation of Tampines homes.

He highlighted the planned relocation of Piner Leisure from 2010, which will free up significant land for future housing and amenities, and increase the area's vibrancy.

1,224 private homes sold at 2 new launches; Tengah Garden Residences 99% taken up at average S$2,120 psf

Singhaiyi's Vela Bay condo project moves 72% of units at S$2,886 psf

By Chong Xin Wei
cxinwei@sp.com.sg

TWO highly anticipated suburban condo launches notched more than 1,220 units in sales over the weekend, with Tengah Garden Residences nearing sell-out at an average price of S$2,120 per square foot (psf).

Vela Bay, the first private residential project in the Bayshore precinct, recorded a 72 per cent take-up rate at S$2,886 psf.

The strong sales reflect sustained demand in the Outside Central Region (OCR), particularly for well-located and competitively priced projects, said Mohan Sandrasegaran, head of research and data analytics at SRI.

In the first quarter of 2026, the OCR led overall new home sales with 916 units, marking its strongest quarterly performance since Q3 2025, when 1,295 units were sold, he pointed out.

Tengah Garden Residences led the weekend sales, with 99 per cent, or 853 of its 863 units sold as at Sunday (Apr 26).

It is the fourth project this year to post a launch take-up rate above 90 per cent. In March, River Modern sold 90 per cent of its units at an average price of S$3,266 psf, while Rivelle Tampines executive condo sold about 93 per cent at S$1,893 psf and Pinery Residences sold 92.5 per cent at S$2,546 psf.

This run of standout showings is a "strong signal of underlying resilience and buyer confidence" in Singapore's private housing market, said PropNex chief executive Kelvin Fong.

"Demand remains firmly anchored by genuine owner-occupiers and investors, who are taking a long-term view on their property purchase," he said.

"We believe the moderate prevailing interest rates and project pricing discipline in today's market have also provided an environment where buyers are ready to commit, especially for well-located developments with a good value proposition."

Tengah Garden Residences: Blockbuster sale

Tengah Garden Residences is the best-selling project by units since Parktown Residence in February 2025, and the strongest performer by percentage since Skye at Holland in October 2025, said Huttons Asia CEO Mark Yip.

Parktown Residence moved more than 87 per cent, or 1,041 of 1,193 units, at an average price of S$2,360 psf at launch, while Skye at Holland moved 98.8 per cent, or

Demand was strong across all unit types for Tengah Garden Residences, the first private residential project in Tengah New Town. PHOTO: HONG LEONG HOLDINGS

658 of 666 units, at S$2,953 psf.

Analysts attributed the strong showing to Tengah Garden Residences' proximity to the future Hong Kah MRT station, on-site retail offerings and first-mover advantage in the developing Tengah estate, which will benefit from planned infrastructure and major employment hubs including the Jurong Lake District.

Demand was strong across all unit types, with transacted prices ranging from S$1,779 psf to S$2,340 psf. Singaporeans accounted for 90 per cent of buyers, developer Hong Leong noted.

All unit types were fully sold at launch, except for the largest four-bedroom premium units with yard, which have 10 units remaining.

ERA Singapore CEO Marcus Chu said HDB upgraders, particularly those in Bukit Batok and Choa Chu Kang, drove sales. ERA data showed that the two towns will see a combined pipeline of more than 2,100 HDB three-room and larger flats reaching their minimum occupation period between 2025 and 2028.

Huttons' Yip reckoned that Tengah Garden Residences' "attractive entry price" of S$980,000, or S$2,025 psf, for one-bedders and S$1.1 million, or S$1,779 psf for two-bedders – comparable to the prices of some EC units in 2026 – appealed to buyers.

Pointing to the developer's S$821 psf per plot ratio land bid, which is among the lowest in the OCR currently, Chu said the cost savings had been passed on to buyers, contributing to the strong sales performance.

Vela Bay: Healthy take-up

In the east, the 99-year leasehold Vela Bay sold 72 per cent, or 371 of its 515 units at an average S$2,886 psf, said developer Singhaiyi in a statement on Saturday.

Vela Bay is the first private condominium in the new Bayshore housing precinct and the first major new launch in the area in more than 20 years, following Costa Del Sol in 2000, said PropNex's Fong, adding that the limited supply of new private housing over the period likely led to pent-up demand.

Sales were mainly led by the two and three-bedders, which collectively made up about 83 per cent of the transactions at the launch, said Fong. Two and three-bedroom units were priced from over S$1.4 million and S$2.2 million, respectively.

Yip added that all unit types garnered "good interest" from buyers, with one of the two penthouses sold.

One-bedroom plus study units were "almost sold out".

Analysts attributed the healthy showing to a cocktail of factors, including right-sizers from larger homes, investors eyeing long-term rental demand, proximity to Bayshore MRT station and schools.

Justin Quek, deputy CEO of Realcon (OrangeTree & ETC) Group, reckoned that limited new private residential supply in Bayshore, where about 3,000 private homes are planned, contributed to strong demand.

The success of Vela Bay could set the tone for upcoming developments in the area, said SRI's Sandrasegaran. A mega mixed-use site at Bayshore Drive, which could yield about 1,280 homes, was recently launched, with its tender closing in July.

Property investment is about choosing a home, not just a house

Every investment is an artistic adventure, says leadership development coach

Choo Yun Ting

Leadership development and executive coach Fiona Wong-Kautz has bought six properties in the past 15 years, but choosing one has always been about a home rather than just bricks and mortar.

Ms Wong-Kautz, who started bespoke furniture outfit +49 Woodcraft in 2004 with her husband Till Oliver Kautz, 36, also sees every investment as an artistic adventure. "Each time I scout the property market, it's like looking at possible canvases to rework and to beautify," she says.

Over time, her urge to do up new spaces meant she settled into a nomadic life, working around property rules, making profits on her housing investments and enjoying the process of decorating new spaces at the same time.

Ms Wong-Kautz, 43, holds a bachelor's in environmental science and previously worked as a credit and risk analyst at a private bank.

She prefers to do research on her own, rather than rely on real estate agents as "nobody knows my needs or thoughts better than myself".

"Property knowledge is more accessible today, and, coupled with your own market intuition, you will know if you are getting a good deal," she notes, adding that she uses property research app ProperHome to look at homes in targeted districts although she does not dismiss real estate agents entirely.

"Where I find agents useful is their familiarity with a project and their ability to find units that are not yet listed or were listed but had been back from the market," said Ms Wong-Kautz, who has a three-year-old daughter.

Besides her home in Singapore, she owns a unit in Kuala Lumpur which is rented out. She is always on the lookout for a good deal and is exploring opportunities on the east coast of Australia, parts of Europe and Asia.

Ms Wong-Kautz also frequently borrows property websites from Australia, Europe and the United States.

"Just love looking at homes?"

Q Describe your residential property
A Our home is a 1,250 sq ft condominium unit with three bedrooms, two bathrooms and a large living, dining and kitchen space. It was purchased in 2017 for $1.3 million.

When I choose a property, location is the biggest draw. Space and layout are important, and how I feel when I first walk into the compound and the apartment makes or breaks the deal for me.

I chose this apartment in Telok Blangah for several reasons - my first home was located in Telok Blangah as well, and this place is close to my future parents, who also live in this area.

I also love the quietness of this old neighbourhood and how it is so

Ms Fiona Wong-Kautz with her husband Till Oliver Kautz and daughter Sophie Rae Kautz. "Each time I scout the property market, it's like looking at possible canvases to rework and to beautify," says the leadership development and executive coach, who has bought six properties in the past 15 years. "I've never intentionally flipped my homes for monetary gains," she says. (F. Wong-K. / PropNex) convenient. It is close to train stop from VivoCity and walking distance to a wet market, food centre and numerous local shops.

Home for Ms Wong-Kautz is now a condominium unit at Harbour View Towers in Telok Blangah. When it comes to investment in properties, Ms Wong-Kautz, who in 2014 started bespoke furniture outfit +49 Woodcraft with her husband, says she is always on the lookout for a good deal.

Also, if I need to rent out this apartment for whatever reason, I believe it will be rather easy to do so, given the proximity to both the Central Business District and Mapletree Industrial Park.

I love the entirety of our home. If I were to map out our movements in it, I wouldn't be surprised to see that every area is well "visited" on a daily basis.

Q What's in your property portfolio?
A This property that I am living in is my sixth purchase.

In 2006, I bought a 1,650 sq ft condominium unit in Meyer Road for about $8.80 million. I sold it for a tidy profit two years later.

My second purchase was a 1,033 sq ft walk-up apartment in Binjai Park in 2008 which was very fun to make over. It was well located and I sold it for a $200,000 profit.

The third unit was a 1,066 sq ft condominium in the vicinity of Clementi Park and Upper Bukit Timah. It was purchased in 2010 for $900,000 and sold within two years for a decent profit.

My fourth unit was my first foray into new apartments. The 797 sq ft unit at Bartley Residences was purchased in 2012, rented out for a small profit.

If I had the choice, I would have kept it, but the additional buyer's stamp duty I had to pay to get a second home didn't make sense, so I sold it in exchange for my current home.

The fifth unit is at Eon City Vogue Suites in Kuala Lumpur. It is a 797 sq ft apartment which was purchased for $300,000. I still own it and it is rented out.

The sixth unit, my current abode, was purchased in 2017. I plan to hold on to it for a while.

My Kuala Lumpur apartment is rented out at about 3 per cent yield. It is not fantastic yield but I am also looking at the capital appreciation in the future.

I have a mortgage on my property, but it is out of personal choice in the current low interest rate environment.

Q What's your financing strategy?
A Borrow as cheaply as you can, with as short a lock-in period as possible. Because cash flow is fluid, you've got to ensure you keep nimble by managing your portfolio the way

I would also not borrow more than 60 per cent of the property's valuation price and that's just a personal discipline to manage cash flow and risk.

I use traditional home loans as well as short-term loans against my portfolio to finance my property purchases. It really depends on the market and what's on offer.

I do not recall doing any refinancing in the past, but just did so this year as the fixed rates I had contracted are pretty good for the next two years.

Q What's your overall investing strategy?

A When I was 16, I invested in an equity mutual fund from a large fund house. I attended their talks and had to get my dad to endorse my very first investment. The fund gave pretty solid returns and I was very pleased with that.

After spending almost 12 years in the banking industry and with countless investments made, my appetite has morphed. I dabble in listed equities, equity options, bonds, foreign exchange, mutual and hedge funds, commodities, property and select businesses in the form of private equity.

Currently, I'm sitting on some cash as a few of my bonds have matured, and in this low interest rate environment, it does not yield good returns so I will need to work my cash by investing in private markets and in direct deals such as fund-start ups or small and medium-sized enterprises needing equity.

Q Moneywise, what were your growing-up years like?

A I'm from a middle-class family where my dad spent many years as an investment banker focusing on mergers and acquisitions, while my mum is a housewife. I have two siblings who live overseas.

We had rather comfortably travelled annually and moved every two to three years when my dad sold the house we lived in for profit. So, in a way, I'm very much like him.

Q My dream home is...

A A self-designed cosy and stylish 2,000 sq ft home on elevated land with a view. It would have three bedrooms and an office, a living area with a good kitchen and dining space. A proper laundry room with a work shed would be great. There would be a patio for barbecues and a well-sized garden where we grow our own vegetables and treat a few hens.

My husband would most likely build everything in the house and I would design a fully off-grid and carbon-neutral utility system where we'd generate our own electricity through a combination of biofuels and plastic waste from our home, wind and solar energy, and use well water from the ground and rain. Being truly self-sustainable would be a nice goal to achieve.

The home would be backed by natural forest and fronted by the ocean, overlooking some form of seasonality. I love nature, and being close to it brings a certain calm and humility to life. The longer I live, the more I focus on living a fuller life and less on the accumulation of material things. I would like my home to reflect that.

Third, I must be inspired when I walk into the space. I have to see possibilities and beauty in it. There were times when I visited places that felt heavy or oppressed. I knew instantly those were not the right homes.

Fourth, it should not tie me down. I want the option of long-term stay, potential rental possibilities or capital return in the longer run.
